Changing the Constitution was a lengthy and difficult struggle. For an amendment to become law, a bill would have to be proposed and passed by both houses of Congress. The bill would then have to be ratified by 2/3 of the states.

Between 1878 and 1920, champions of voting rights for women worked tirelessly, although their strategies varied.

As each state ratified the 19th Amendment, National Woman's Party head Alice Paul sewed another star on the Ratification Flag.

DETERMINATION

Do YOU have a goal that you want to achieve? What is it?

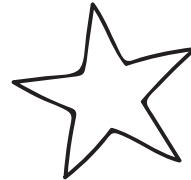

If your brother or sister, or younger friend wanted to know what DETERMINATION meant, what would you tell them?

Activists lectured, wrote, marched, lobbied, and protested. Suffragists were heckled, jailed, and sometimes physically abused.

The drive for ratification of the 19th Amendment was an unprecedented national campaign that expanded our democracy.

Helena Hill weed was jailed for carrying a banner that read, "Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed."

ROAD TO RATIFICATION

In 1919, after the House of Representatives and the Senate passed the Amendment, suffragists focused all their efforts on getting 36 states to ratify the proposed amendment.

The states are shown in the order they approved the Amendment. With 36 votes (the 2/3 required) the ratification was completed and became part of the constitution on August 18, 1920.

Can you name the states?
